

LIGHTING

I'm a huge fan of using natural light in every project I take on. To me, it blankets the shots with a muted tone that feels rich and authentic.

Sunlight almost always provides the opportunity to take a scene to another level – whether capturing it through linen curtains or bending it around corners with metallic surfaces, the sun can create natural beauty on screen. Light also creates depth within a shot. For instance, placing the camera in a naturally shadowed area and filming into the light will add tremendous depth to the shot and enhances the expansiveness of the Southern California landscape.
